Double Degree in International Social Work with Children, Young People and Families

The Protestant University Ludwigsburg and the Newman University in Birmingham-UK, jointly offer a seven semester Bachelor Degree in International Social Work with Children, Young People and Families. At the end of the study program, students from Germany and the UK are awarded a dual recognition from both universities.

The double degree program leads students to cutting edge political discourses on themes that affect children, young people and families in their communities.

The program opens opportunities to experience innovative classes through social laboratories, e-learning teams, blended learning methods and community practice. It provides professional practice with international social service agencies in the UK and Germany.

Students attend seminars taught in multi-disciplinary approaches by teachers representing diverse academic backgrounds.

Study program at a glance

The double degree program is open to students already registered under the International Social Work or Social Work degree programs at the Protestant University Ludwigsburg. Students from Germany study in Newman University Birmingham in their fourth and fifth semesters. While studying in the EH, German students will be joined by British students in their third and seventh semesters.
